I suggest 3 monitors because they already have 3 monitors running there and they could be relocated more quickly than mobilizing more from TRC; the ASB East monitor would be 0.4 miles more to the east, which is closer than the highest concentration stationary measurement.

Given the size of the ASB it seems that 3 should be adequate.

That is a big difference. Why are we limiting this to just 3 monitors? Is it because that is all they bought?

Attached is a new H2S monitor location for the ASB East monitor if the east boundary of Dove Pond is truly at the fence line.
